Dear Friends Who Share Hope for a Community Free of Domestic Violence,

I am proud to share with you Project Safe’s 2016 Annual Report. As 2016 came to a close, I ended my sixth year on the board of Project Safe including the past two years spent as board chair. I’ll stay on for one more year as “past chair” for which I am grateful as I’m not ready to leave this board that I’ve come to love. Serving on the board of Project Safe has been an honor for me. Our board is a true working board— we lead the staff in strategic planning, but also roll up our sleeves to organize fundraisers and awareness events such as Groovy Nights, Stomp Out Domestic Violence, and Dancing with the Athens Stars. We dream big and work to ensure the financial stability of the organization that we know spends 90 cents of every dollar raised on direct support for clients. We meet, we laugh, sometimes we cry, and mostly we mobilize around the belief and hope that through crisis intervention, ongoing support services, systems change advocacy, prevention and education, that our community, and in fact our larger society, can end domestic violence. We share in the belief and hope that all people deserve to exist in the context of loving relationships free from intimate partner violence.

Where do the supporters of Project Safe find hope? Hope lives in the hearts of the 27 full and part time employees and over 380 volunteers that work for Project Safe. Hope is heard in the voices of the 2893 hotline callers and 255 teens who texted the Breaking Silence Teen Text Line last year. Hope exists in the circles of support group meetings, the power of individual counseling sessions, and the education that has occurred through the 274 presentations and training sessions during the year to businesses, social service agencies, judges and attorneys, school classes, church groups and civic clubs.

I ask you to get a cup of your favorite coffee or tea, settle into a comfortable chair and spend some time digesting the information contained in this report. My hope is that you will then take a moment to reflect on what you can do to help us to continue to build a hopeful future— one free of domestic violence— for the adults and children that Project Safe serves.

~ Dawn Meyers, Board Chair 2015-16
Featured Program: Through an Open Window

In 2016 Project Safe and the Domestic Violence Task Force of Athens-Clarke and Oconee Counties held its 6th Annual Through an Open Window event to raise awareness about domestic violence.

Anyone whose life has been touched by domestic violence was invited to create a painting at various workshops and open painting sessions throughout the year. Over 90 paintings were then displayed throughout October at ARTini’s studio to commemorate Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The exhibit opened with a reception honoring the individuals, businesses and churches selected by our local task force as Advocates of the Year. At the conclusion of the exhibit, the paintings were brought to Project Safe’s emergency shelter and outreach offices. Hundreds of paintings are on display at Project Safe’s facilities to inspire and challenge staff, volunteers and clients.
* In 2016, advocates answered 2893 hotline calls—a new record for our organization.
* Advocates at Project Safe's outreach offices at the Family Protection Center reviewed police arrest reports in Clarke and Madison Counties, and were able to reach out through calls or letters to offer support and services to 665 victims of domestic violence.
* 212 individuals were sheltered at Project Safe's emergency shelter.
* Through our relationship with the UGA Vet School, we provided 1986 nights of pet shelter.

"I've learned new ways to cope with frustration, anxiety, depression, and to build strength."

"Thank you so much for everything. I am a different person than when I first came here. I learned to let go!"

In 2016, Project Safe worked with Georgia Tech’s Institute for People and Technology to create software for our teen text line. The software allows multiple users to log in from their own mobile devices which in turn allows us to handle greater texting volume. During the year, we expanded the service area of the text line from 32 counties to 147 (on its way to being statewide in 2017). Operated by student interns under the supervision of dedicated staff member, Breaking Silence is an important resource for teens seeking information and help about their dating relationships.

Texter: So I left him because I found someone who is really honest and even came to visit me and makes me really happy.

Breaking Silence: I'm glad that you were able to find someone that values you and that you feel like you're in a better place now.

Texter: yes and it was the help from you

Breaking Silence: How are you feeling about being broken up?

Texter: Merry Christmas Sophia. Thank you so much for all of your help!! I have finally escaped from him and I am happy!!

Breaking Silence: It's totally normal to still have feelings like that after a breakup, but I'm glad to hear that you feel relieved.

Texter: I feel relieved but I still smile whenever he texts me.

Texter: Thanks—Thanks for also checking up on me.

Texter: Well everything is going a lot better now. We took time to sit down and talk. After the talk we had a better understanding of each other and the situation. Thank you guys so much for your help I really appreciate it. I will definitely always come to you guys when I have a problem.
Since 2003, Project Safe has employed a staff person to lead a collaborative effort to review closed cases of domestic violence fatalities and near-fatalities, and implement recommended improvements in community response. In 2016, our Community Response Coordinator, Pat Peterson, led our fatality review panel in its examination of serious closed cases. The panel reviewed four cases, making recommendations to improve victim safety and abuser accountability.

Education and awareness were highlights of 2016 as a collaborative training on strangulation assault came to fruition in the form of a webinar including presentations from Project Safe executive director Joan Prittie, Project Safe board member Dr. Joanne Cono, and Western Circuit District Attorney Ken Maulden and Assistant DA James Chafin. Pat Peterson led an effort to conduct educational presentations in low-income housing communities for both residents and staff.

Project Safe participated in a collaborative effort led by the Georgia Coalition Against Domestic Violence to identify parole-eligible survivors of domestic violence in Georgia prisons and assist with post-conviction relief efforts, and our legislative advocacy included participation at Stop Violence Against Women Day at the state Capitol.
Those in domestic violence situations are often kept isolated from friends and other family members, relying heavily on their pets for companionship and support. Neglecting, torturing, or even killing a pet is a powerful weapon of abuse. Survivors of domestic violence may be hesitant to leave an abusive home because they don’t want to leave their pets behind.

Project Safe works tirelessly to remove such barriers to safety. Since 2009, Project Safe has partnered with the University of Georgia College of Veterinary Medicine to provide shelter for our client’s pets. Students, staff, and faculty volunteer to serve as temporary foster homes. Thanks to help from the UGA Vet School, people and their pets can find safety, healing, and hope.

Project Safe provided

I remember talking to a mother after one community presentation about Project Safe services. This mother was specifically worried about her teenage daughter’s relationship with her boyfriend. She described to me an emotionally abusive relationship and we talked about the best ways for her to talk to her daughter about her concerns.

At Project Safe, we encourage family and friends to remain supportive of loved ones who may be in an abusive relationship, which we recognize can be very difficult. We talked about how this mom could stay supportive of her daughter without condoning the abusive behaviors of her boyfriend. This mom, as all parents do, wished her daughter could see that no one deserves to be physically or emotionally harmed in a relationship.

Luckily, a few weeks later, the mom let me know that her daughter was able to end that relationship. She wrote to me explaining what happened. “The young man tried to give her an ultimatum of choosing between him and me. She told him good bye. All I could think of was our conversation about how important it was that she get unconditional love and support from me to maintain our relationship. I am so grateful I made that choice. I really feel like that's what gave her the strength to walk away.”

In 2016, Project Safe delivered 274 presentations and trainings -- a 20% increase over the previous year.

Project Safe believes that by focusing on prevention and education, we can bring our community closer to ending domestic violence. If you’d like to request a presentation or professional in-service training, please email the Community Involvement & Volunteer Coordinator, Linnea Ionno, at lionno@project-safe.org.
Ongoing supportive services are designed to help people move on from unhealthy relationships and heal from the pain of experiencing or witnessing domestic abuse. It can take months or even years to become finally free from the emotional, physical and financial ties of an abuser. Our services such as individual counseling, support groups, advocacy, case management, and transitional housing help people discover their own strength and put their lives back together.

Outreach services are provided to survivors of domestic violence who are in need of support but not necessarily shelter. After working with Project Safe 98% of outreach clients report that they have strategies to enhance their safety, and 99% report knowledge of community resources.

Project Safe served 1606 women, children, and men at our outreach offices in the Family Protection Center.

Strangulation is a significant power and control tactic in abusive relationships, and in recent years Project Safe worked alongside other organizations to pass HB 911, which expanded the definition of felony aggravated assault to specifically include strangulation. Since the bill’s unanimous passage through the Georgia legislature in 2014, Project Safe has made training on this issue a priority to ensure that law enforcement, health care providers, attorneys, and advocates understand the signs and impact of strangulation.

The Lion Heart Society is an Atlanta-based nonprofit that serves domestic violence task forces nationwide. This year, our two organizations joined forces to provide a free webinar to help professionals enhance their own knowledge and understanding of strangulation assaults, along with education on how to improve responses to survivors, improve policy, and to increase community understanding and offender accountability.

Through the collaborative efforts of Project Safe Associate Director Tangela Ferguson and Lion Heart Society Founder Elizabeth O’Neal, this webinar provided participants with 2.5 continuing education credits and covered both the physiological medical assessment of strangulation and the application of Georgia law to strangulation assault. It included presentations from Project Safe Executive Director Joan Prittie, Western Circuit District Attorney Ken Mauldin, physician and Project Safe board member Joanne Cono, and Western Circuit Deputy Chief District Attorney James Chaffin.

The initial goal of the training was to educate 30 individuals in the Athens-Oconee area. We exceeded this goal by 733% – we had 303 registrants, and approximately 250 individuals or organizations attended the webinar statewide. Even this may not reflect the true number of participants since multiple people could view from one sign-in. Attendees included staff of an entire school district in South Georgia, multiple police and sheriff’s departments, two universities, two military bases, staff from the US Department of Defense, hospitals, and social workers, counselors, prosecutors and family lawyers from across the state.

Thanks to the donation of more than 100 hours of volunteer time as well as funds to underwrite the costs of producing the webinar, the Lion Heart Society enabled Project Safe and our local domestic violence task force to reach beyond the Athens area and educate people throughout Georgia.

"Thank you for this training, it was very informative. Sadly we had to put everything we learned into practice immediately as we got a strangulation victim at our shelter the next day." --webinar participant
As a former Mayor of Athens, my work with the Project Safe Thrift Shop has revealed some of the most resourceful and industrious people I have ever met. Grandmothers and mothers preparing for new children. Parents seeking status brands for picky teenagers and students supplementing Hope scholarships. Loved ones determined to find better gifts. Amateur entrepreneurs gathering goods for yard sales. Not a business, the Project Safe Thrift Shop operates as a service. Donations find their way to a future of appreciation and life enhancement. With every hour I feel joy in helping.”—Gwen O’Looney
Project Safe Interns and Volunteers

Project Safe began in the 1970’s as a network of volunteer safe homes. Our programs and services have grown and changed through the years, but our reliance on volunteers to help provide the variety and quality of services has remained constant. In 2016, 384 volunteers contributed 21,561 hours in activities ranging from helping at our thrift store to providing meals for support groups to helping to plan our popular events and fundraisers. Highly trained student interns operate our teen text line, answer the hotline, co-facilitate groups and school presentations, and work at our emergency shelter and outreach offices.

"As an intern here, I’ve had the chance to see the ins and outs of this organization and how each and every situation is handled with grace, care, and love. Not only that, but the staff is caring, considerate, and is composed of some of the most incredible people I have ever met. Project Safe’s unwavering support of victims of domestic violence is the perfect example of how a nonprofit should function. Keep up the good work!"  --former intern

"I am so proud and inspired everyday to work for such a dedicated and honest organization."
   -former intern, current staff member

"I volunteer at the Project Safe Thrift Store, which provides items for clients and raises funds for the work done by Project Safe. They are always organized and ready for volunteers to help. It is very satisfying to help with an organization that does such important work that is needed in our community."

FY 16 income and expenses are shown below. Project Safe received $1,251,427 in cash and $258,732 through donations of time with the value of a volunteer hour estimated at $12. Client services accounted for 91% of all spending.

Project Safe How Your Money Counts

- New ID card for someone whose abuser stole it: $32
- A week in a motel under an assumed name when the shelter is full: $317
- Three months of weekly counseling sessions for trauma and PTSD: $900

"I found out about Project Safe when David Hale was donating the proceeds of one of his tattoos to them. Not sure exactly what they did, I looked into their services, and found out just how much they do for the community here. I decided to volunteer, and it has been one of the most rewarding, empowering, and humbling experiences of my life.

It's rewarding to be able to directly help those in need and to see how much good this organization does not only in the lives of those it directly helps, but also to the community as it advocates for awareness and policy changes to eliminate domestic violence in the future.

It's empowering to see people who are capable of overcoming anything, rising from situations of extreme abuse to become confident, independent, and successful individuals. It inspires you to think about all that you can accomplish if you put your mind to it.

And finally, this has been such a humbling experience. So often, we can lose sight of the many gifts we have, whether that's money, education, resources, loving family, or supportive friends. Working with people who truly appreciate life's gifts reminds us all to look at what we have in our own lives.

Reminds us to share it, make the most of it, and to give back with our time and our money to organizations like Project Safe that work to make the lives of everyone in the community a little bit better, a little bit more loving, and a little bit safer."

Thank You!

“Long before our incorporation in 1990, Project Safe existed as a network of safe houses. Our founders opened their homes to strangers so that people with nowhere else to go could escape the horror of abuse. Today, we ask ourselves as an organization, What is the equivalent act of courage that we must do to end domestic violence?”

These words paraphrase a conversation the board and I had many years ago. I’ve written them on our annual report every year since, and think about them every day. Only time will tell if we’re as courageous as our founders, but every day we honor their effort and sacrifice, and every day we work to be worthy of the generosity, support and trust given to us by our community. - Joan Prittie, Executive Director
